Letter from the President

A University that Speaks to our Needs

It is often said that a University cannot be all things to all people. Therefore, many universities across the nation try to find areas of expertise and focus, and attempt to build their strengths around those selected areas. Other colleges and universities have limited their enrollment to a very select group of high performing students who they feel will improve their position in the various ranking systems that exist. Some community colleges are open admissions institutions and cater to the needs of students who may not have had a very academically successful high school record. Strategic choices are important for every institution and the University of the Virgin Islands is no exception to this standard practice.

Yet our mission, location and singularity in the Virgin Islands force us to speak to a more diverse and complex set of educational, social and economic needs. UVI must be a beacon of hope for the high achieving student as well as for those who need a second chance. We must be an excellent teaching institution, but we must also foster cutting edge research that can advance our scientific knowledge and help address complex social challenges. We must speak to the needs of our students, faculty and staff, but we must also speak to the needs of the community. An excellent example of this last point is our Brothers With a Cause organization that is focused on assisting our male students in their quest for graduation, but is also committed to actively addressing the crisis facing males within the Territory and the broader Caribbean. There are so many other examples of how UVI endeavors to balance our mandate to serve our students and those around us. From our Cooperative Extension Service and Agricultural Experiment Station programs, to our newly approved Bachelor of Business Administration degree in Hotel and Hospitality Management, UVI is constantly striving to address the needs of both our internal and external communities.

These multiple needs and challenges, which we seek daily to address, require that we have needed resources at our disposal. Therefore we are thankful for the support that we consistently receive from the local government and from private donors. Without that support we could not come close to fulfilling our mission or addressing a portion of the myriad needs that exist at the University and the Virgin Islands. We highlight in this report the important generosity from our private donors and I want to personally thank all of our supporters and friends for their support, both monetary and non-monetary. In the years to come we must develop even greater support from all sources if we are to continue to address the existing complex issues and respond to emergent challenges.

Though cognizant that we cannot be all things to all people, yet we must keep an open door and open heart to the people of the Virgin Islands and the concerns and challenges they and we encounter. As the only institution of higher education in the Territory, we cannot afford to be insular and exist in isolation from the challenges of today and the opportunities that the future holds. The Virgin Islands will never achieve its greater calling if the University of the Virgin Islands is not a thriving institution of excellence in teaching, research and service. This is an awesome burden that we carry, but we carry it with pride and humility. Our major request is that our friends, alumni and supporters will always travel with us on this majestic journey of life, and that we will remain faithful to each other and to our endless possibilities. UVI speaks to needs, for this University was born out of the need to serve the people of this Territory. To this calling we pledge to always remain true.

Sincerely yours,

David Hall., President
University of the Virgin Islands

UWI History

The University of the Virgin Islands mission requires that it address instruction, research and community service as it enhances the lives of the people in the territory and the region. UVI fulfills its mission and vision through the Small Business Development Center, the Eastern Caribbean Center, the Center for Marine and Environmental Studies, the Agricultural Experiment Station and other offices and programs.

Students who come to UVI choose from a broad array of associates and bachelors degree programs in more than 20 curriculum areas through each of its schools and colleges. UVI also offers six masters degree programs, a post-masters degree program in educational psychology, and certificate workforce training courses through the UVI Community Engagement and Lifelong Learning (CELL) area.

The University's 2,700 full-time, part-time and graduate students come from the U.S. Virgin Islands, 21 U.S. states and approximately 15 other countries, primarily in the Eastern Caribbean. The multicultural student body has the opportunity to participate in research, service learning, internships and a variety of other learning experiences on and off campus.

UVI's faculty is comprised of 250 highly qualified, full-time and part-time members. Seventy percent of the full-time faculty holds doctoral degrees.

Cooperative agreements between the University of the Virgin Islands and many other leading universities allow UVI students to receive degrees and participate in learning experiences not offered on the UVI campuses. The Boston University School of Medicine cooperative agreement allows UVI students, after meeting certain qualifications, to be accepted provisionally into the medical school at the end of their sophomore year. The University of Mexico agreement provides the opportunity for students to become more proficient in Spanish by spending a semester or year in Mexico.

Students in St. Martin and the British Virgin Islands earn bachelors degrees via cohort programs the University of the Virgin Islands has established with the University of St. Martin and H. Lavity Stouff Community College in Tortola, respectively. UVI has also signed agreements with two other regional institutions, Dominica State College and Clarence F. Bryant College in St. Kitts, which has made it possible for graduates of these institutions to be admitted to upper-level courses in baccalaureate degree programs at UVI.

The University of the Virgin Islands is increasingly being recognized as a leading American institution of higher education in the Caribbean.

A Letter from the Vice President for Institutional Advancement

Dear UVI family,

Fiscal year 2010 was an exciting one for philanthropy at UVI. Alumni giving – from those who know the institution best – was at an all-time high. Approximately 10 percent of our alumni gave back to UVI, the highest percentage ever. If they do not demonstrate a commitment to this University, why should others?

As a University dedicated to students' success, we can take pride in the fact that our graduates are doing well and that they recognize the part UVI has played in their success. In fiscal year 2009-10, we received $1.4 million in annual giving, surpassing our goal and setting new records. The message is getting out that support for UVI is helping students, the University, and our Virgin Islands community move ahead.

We are determined to meet the goals of Vision 2012, UVI's strategic plan, as well as the priorities set by President Hall. Our mission is to enhance both student success and the vitality of the territory. We will reach out to our alumni and friends to be our partners in the quest to build a fundamentally better UVI.

I am delighted to share with you the names of those who have already heeded the call by donating to this University. We are so grateful for your critical support.

My very best,

Dionne V. Jackson

Nurtured By UVI, Alumni Pay it Forward...

Librarian Cynthia Richards

Yellow and black caution tape cordons off sections of the Ralph M. Paiewonsky Library on the University of the Virgin Islands' St. Thomas campus, plastic sheeting drapes other areas, and 'pardon us' signs are posted throughout. They are evidence that renovations and upgrades are underway.

No one is happier about this than Cynthia Richards. She has good reason to be. Richards is a Librarian III at the library. But Richards is equally happy about the changes because she is seeing her money at work. A long-time supporter of UVI, Richards gets excited every time she sees upgrades to the campus, every time she interacts with new students and every time the University moves forward in meeting its mission.

"I firmly believe that you should give back to those institutions that serve you well," said Richards, a UVI alumna, turned employee. "The College/University has been part of my life for the most part of 40 years." After earning her bachelor's degree in Social Science from the then College of the Virgin Islands (CVI) in 1973, Richards went on to complete a Master of Library Science degree and worked as a librarian for the VI

Department of Education. She worked as a part-time librarian at the University since 1974. Following her retirement she became a full-time UVI employee in 2000.

"Living in a small place, when you give to the University you can see the direct impact it has on the students of the Territory," Richards said. "Over the years I have seen many of my former elementary school students, now UVI students, come here and use this library," Richards said.

Richards has been giving to UVI for the past 17 years. Since 2000 she has given consistently through payroll deductions. Richards does not restrict her gifts to a particular area. She prefers to allow decision makers to use her gifts in areas they deem most necessary.

In these tough economic times Judith Rogers calls payroll deduction a “workable solution” for contributing to the annual fund. “I understand what it takes to operate the University,” said Rogers, the manager for Learning Resources and Faculty Technology Service at UVI. “I understand that if we don’t support UVI it will not be viable. I want it to be viable. The territory will be a very different place without the University.”

Rogers knows first-hand the impact UVI makes. As a young woman with a family, she earned an associate’s degree from CVI in 1977. “The environment was very nurturing,” Rogers said of CVI. “I was employed as a student worker, I was going to school, and I was actively involved in student government.”

Contributions from Rogers have been consistently rolling into UVI for the past 18 years. She encourages all UVI employees to support the institution. “We spend our money very easily on all sorts of things,” Rogers said. “Payroll deduction is the way to do it because you don’t have to think about it.”

While payroll deduction was only available to UVI employees, for the first time ever, it is now available to employees of the VI Government through the new UVI/VI Government Payroll Deduction Initiative. “It’s a milestone for the institution and the community to together work on initiatives which directly benefit our students, our future leaders,” Linda I. Smith, UVI’s director of Alumni Affairs and Annual Giving, said of the initiative. “There is no minimum amount for a gift,” Smith said. “The community can also designate which fund they want their contributions to go to .”

The UVI/VI Government Payroll Deduction Initiative comes on the heels of the UVI on-line giving, which became a reality on June 30, 2010. Anyone can give to UVI instantly, via UVI’s website www.uvi.edu.

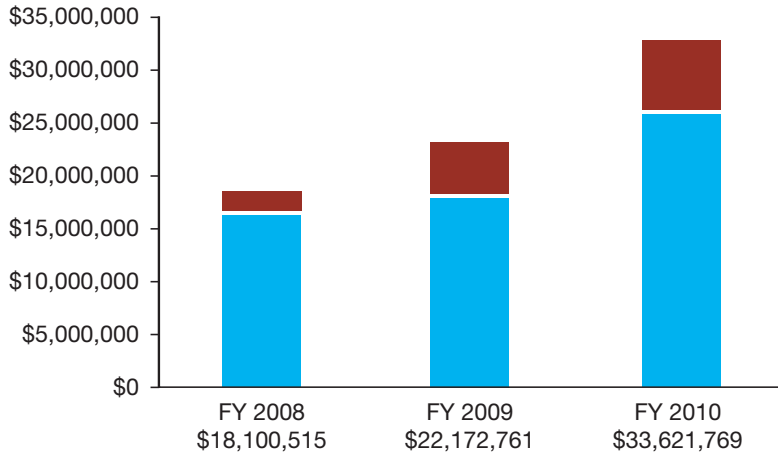

“I feel that the University has given me so much, so I want to do something, give back, or pay it forward as they say,” Rogers said.

“To me it’s like an obligation that everyone should have,” Richards said. Giving is as much about the recipient as it is the giver. Richards summed it up nicely: “It makes me feel good.”
